UNIVERSITY OF DELHI

Report on the Visit to Pradhan Mantri Sangrahalaya

20 September 2025, Delhi- The National Service Scheme (NSS) Society of Satyawati College (Evening) had the privilege of visiting the Pradhan Mantri Sangrahalaya in Delhi. This museum, dedicated to India's Prime Ministers, has been established as a living tribute to the leadership, vision, and contributions of those who have guided the nation since independence. For our NSS volunteers, the visit was a deeply educational and inspiring experience, combining history, governance, and the vision of a developed India.

The purpose of the visit was to acquaint student volunteers with the life stories, struggles, and achievements of India's Prime Ministers. It offered an opportunity to understand how each leader contributed to the shaping of modern India, and how their decisions, policies, and values continue to influence the path towards Viksit Bharat 2047.

The museum welcomed a diverse audience, including students, teachers, researchers, and tourists. The visit began with an introductory session where museum staff highlighted the objective of the Sangrahalaya, preserving the legacy of India's democratic journey while inspiring future generations. The emphasis was placed on the role of youth in carrying forward the ideals of service, leadership, and nation-building.

The galleries of the Sangrahalaya were the most fascinating part of the visit. State-of-the-art digital displays, interactive installations, and rare photographs brought to life the journeys of India's Prime Ministers. Our volunteers walked through sections dedicated to each leader, exploring their vision, contributions, and challenges. The exhibits not only chronicled India's political history but also reflected on how leadership shapes society and development.

The use of technology made the experience immersive. Holograms, audio-visual documentaries, and interactive touchscreens allowed visitors to engage with history in a new way. Students were particularly impressed by the detailed accounts of milestones such as India's independence, Green Revolution, economic reforms, and digital progress.

For the NSS volunteers of Satyawati College (Evening), this visit was more than just a historical tour. It was a chance to reflect on how the ideals of service, sacrifice, and leadership are connected with the vision of NSS itself. Many volunteers noted how the lives of the Prime Ministers offered lessons in resilience, dedication, and people-centric leadership, values that are central to community service.

The visit also fostered interaction among volunteers, who discussed how India's leadership legacy could inspire their own initiatives at the college and community level. Walking through the Sangrahalaya created a strong sense of pride and responsibility, reminding everyone of the long journey India has traveled and the road that lies ahead in achieving the dream of a developed nation.

Overall, the experience was enriching and thought-provoking. The volunteers gained not only historical knowledge but also a deeper understanding of their role as citizens. The museum reinforced the idea that leadership and service go hand in hand, and that the youth must step forward to carry the torch of development, unity, and progress.

The visit of the NSS Society of Satyawati College (Evening) to the Pradhan Mantri Sangrahalaya thus stands out as a memorable day. It gave students the opportunity to honor India's democratic legacy and reflect on their responsibility in shaping its future. For our society, it was an inspiring step in aligning with the dream of Viksit Bharat 2047.

This visit was made possible under the guidance of our NSS Programme Officer, Dr. Manorama Mishra, and the support of our Programme Convener, Dr. Babita Singh. We also acknowledge the contributions of our Programme Co-Conveners Dr. Anand Mishra, Dr. Tarun Kumar, Ms. Nilakshi Moran, and Dr. Shiv Shankar Tiwary for their efforts in coordinating the visit. Above all, we extend our gratitude to our Principal, Professor Hari Mohan Sharma, whose constant encouragement continues to inspire the NSS Society of Satyawati College (Evening)
